“ Jim Kulle was always one of the best men I've ever known. He was a true gentleman in every sense of the word. After our Aunt Chris died, Jim continued to come to Georgia to visit us. We loved his visits because he was a loving person and so comfortable to be around. He met a number of our friends and they all became "Uncle Jim" fans who insisted on spending time with him whenever he was down here. At some point in each of his visits, he and I would take a day-long road trip. He was always ready for a new adventure...and a couple of those trips were just that!! We never got lost, but we were seriously misplaced a time or two!! I miss him so much already, but I'm so grateful for having known him as a family member and a beloved friend. Thanks to his generous nature, I have lots of pictures that he took of flowers in our garden and I have his recipe for hot German potato salad. The greatest consolation is knowing that he has been reunited with his family and his beloved Christine.
